From Our Pastor, Father George

Dear Parishioners of St. Martha,

Sunday Sermon – 20th Sunday of Ordinary Time

From Deacon Bill:

Have you wondered if Jesus wasn't particularly sharp with the woman in today's Gospel? I've wondered why He didn't listen to her pleading for a healing for her child. First He ignored her, and then He told her that He came to save the house of Israel and not the Canaan pagan community from which she came. Her tribe knew knowing about the God of Israel in which Jesus was working. Even the disciples wanted to get rid of her by asking Jesus to give her what she wanted.

In the end, it was her persistence that won her Jesus' attention. It was her faith in Him that cured her daughter. It was her longing for the spiritual food that only Jesus could offer her that she craved.

Jesus shows us something important here. Even though we who sit here today are in need of God's salvation (or we wouldn't be here in the first place) we are not in an exclusive club. All the world is in need of salvation. All the world needs Jesus' healing.

But the question arises, how is the rest of the world to receive that word of Jesus that will heal us, just as the woman's child was healed? The answer is: from you and me.

The woman may have asked for scraps from the table of Jesus, just as we pray to the Lord for our food of healing and salvation, but you and I have to feed others as well: feed them our words of comfort and healing. We are to provide real food for the hungry as best we can, but we are also to feed the hungry of spirit, to carry on His work by providing His miracles in our world. Easy words. Difficult to do.

We might think that we can sit back and give to various charities that feed the hungry out of our wallets and be remote from their problems. Finances are needed, but it's not enough. Working in a soup kitchen on a voluntary basis, feeding the homeless, working for Caritas, are noble things to do, and thank God for so many generous people who do them – but they are not enough. Food for the belly will last until the next meal, but spiritual food lasts forever.

But how do we feed the spiritually hungry ourselves? What kind of food is it that all of us can give them that will last forever? Let's begin in our homes. Jesus presents a challenge to those who are parents and grandparents and those who care for the young. Children are spiritually hungry, even when they don't realize it. What do we do to feed them? Are we living the Christian lives that we should, providing them with good examples and teaching them about the great love that God has for them and how much they need Him? What about those in our families who do not know God? Do they see in us what it means to be a Christian? Would they want to be one by what they see in us? How do we feed them?

What about our jobs, or even classrooms? Do our co-workers or fellow students see us as examples to follow? Are we honest? Do we work or study at the best of our abilities? Or are we constant complainers, people who put others down, people who are unreliable and put things off? What kind of "food" are feeding our fellow employees or fellow students? Are we giving them spiritual food by what we say and do as followers of Jesus, or we just feeding them "baloney?"

All of these questions challenge us to think about our role in life. We don't do it alone. Jesus provides us with the means and the miracle. We must take what He has given us from His table and share it with those in our worlds: family, job, school rooms, neighborhoods.

The next time that you think that you can do nothing to provide spiritual food for your neighbor, whoever that might be, think about this: you are Christ's feet, so that He can walk amongst His people; you are Christ's mouth, bringing words of comfort and peace; you are Christ's ears, providing sympathy to those who need someone to listen; you are Christ's instructor, teaching His people about God's great love for all of His people; you are Christ's hands, bringing His comforting touch and healing to the Canaanites of the world who are crying out for it; and you are Christ's great heart, bringing His love to everyone.

"Food for the belly will last until the next meal, but spiritual food lasts forever."
